Hawaii lost one of her illustrious sons last Saturday by the death in the Kona hospital at Kailua, Hawaii, of Judge John L. Kauai, magistrate of that district. The judge was 74 years old and had been in the hospital a month, suffering from diabetes.

Attorney, school teacher, diplomat, farmer, seaman, and statesman, Judge Kauai was one of the most versatile, energetic, and public-spirited men of his generation in the Hawaiian Islands.

The late judge is survived by three sons, Attorney Abraham G. Kauai, county treasurer of Kauai; J. L. Kauai, Jr., and Lot Kauai Kauai, who has become famous as an opera singer and Spanish dancer.

Judge Kauai was born in Kailua, Kona, Hawaii. His father was Spanish and his mother Hawaiian. He was married in 1870, having three sons, all of whom are living, and four daughters, all of whom have passed away.

The deceased spent several years in Hawaii, where he practiced law. He was early left without parents. At the age of 12 years he was sent to Laysan Island. After graduation three months later in the office of the Hawaiian king, he was appointed to the position of school teacher at his birthplace in Kona.

Kauai came back to Honolulu and began the study of the law under Chief Justice Harris and later under Chief Justice Judd. During his preparation for the bar, Kauai served one year as a clerk at the Hawaiian court, and taught school at Hilo, adding to his legal education by studying through the night.

In 1877, he was appointed district magistrate for Koolaula on the other side of the island. This post he held for several years. He was elected to the legislature from that district and from this district.

In 1883 King Kalanikou named him secretary to J. A. Kamehameha, minister to London, to enter into negotiations for the purpose of buying Japanese to this country to raise the young at-borne, not only from the point of view of the state, but as well as a matter of honor.

In 1894 he was made assistant of the Hawaiian government. He was appointed to the position of district magistrate for Koolaula on the other side of the island. This post he held for several years. He was elected to the legislature from that district and from this district.

WARM WELCOME FOR JUDGE DOLE WHEREVER HE GOES ON MAINLAND

Judge Sanford B. Dole's present trip to the mainland is winning a remarkable amount of attention from the newspapers there. The venerable and picturesque jurist and ex-president of Hawaii is noticed wherever he goes, and he generally has a good interview for the reporters. The following is from the Honolulu, Washingtonian, of Honolulu, Washington, a paper owned by the way, by Congressman Albert Johnson, who visited here with the congressional party in 1915.

"Tall, straight as an Indian, with flowing white beard and frosted hair, he bears his seventy-three years as lightly as many men of fifty. Kindly, dignified, interested in passing events, his face shows no signs of the aging process."

The city now has some 60,000 contented and happy people and want is unknown in the islands. All classes are filled with patriotism and we shall furnish our share of fighting men.

The natives are a most gentle and lovable people. Fond of music and dancing and, of late, becoming devoted to dramatic art. They have beautiful open air theaters and produce some wonderful plays. Our royal band has lost its German leader but is playing splendidly under a native Hawaiian.

Judge Dole will leave today for Williams College, in Massachusetts, to attend a reunion of his class, which was graduated in 1867—just fifty years ago. He says most of his classmates are living and will be at the reunion. He attributes their longevity to the remarkable influence of their president. Young men who came under his influence were never dissipated but led sane lives.

Hoquiam is proud to have had Judge Dole as a visitor and hopes for a speedy return and a longer stay in our midst.

PAUL STEEL TO LEAVE CITIZENS' WORK ON KAUAI

(Special Star-Bulletin Correspondence) LIHUE, Kauai, June 5.—Paul Steel, citizenship secretary of the Kauai Y. M. C. A., has tendered his resignation and will leave for Honolulu. Mr. Steel's work has been highly praised and he has made many friends on Kauai who regret his departure exceedingly.

At the recent annual meeting of the general committee of the Kauai Y. M. C. A. Mr. Steel was voted an increase in salary and his work was highly commended. His resignation comes as a surprise to his friends.

It is hoped that a competent worker may be found to carry on the work that has already been started among the Filipinos.

Described By a Person Probably Made Mad By One of Them

From the Dallas News. A ukulele is, in fact, an instrument of torture. It was invented by Catherine de Medici, who tried it out on her friends and proved its efficiency. It was later taken up by the Hawaiians, who were at that time a desperate people and didn't care what happened to them. It was originally used by the Hawaiians for an accompaniment to their death song. The Hawaiian fatalist would dress himself in a grass skirt, take his ukulele in one hand, his sword in the other, and repair to the sea's edge. While he raised his voice in song, reciting the reasons why he was about to kill himself, he strummed on the ukulele. The noise was so dreadful it used to frighten the fish. Crouching and whooping by turns the near-to-death Hawaiian would sing:

Ukulele, ukulele, ukulele! Ug gom, ee gom, giug. Samoha, kui giug, giugio. Ug giug giug, giugio!

Working himself into a frenzy and strumming his ukulele like he was beating the breakfast breakfast, the poor Hawaiian would come to a crescendo of desperation and smite his ukulele till his hands bled, then, furious at the sight of his own blood and wild from the effects of his sufferings at the hands of the ukulele, throw himself upon the point of his spear. Many such unfortunate remained for years pinned to the ground like grasshoppers with shingle nails through them. Of course, the primitive Hawaiian was only a simple savage, but he at least had the decency to commit suicide after going on a ukulele spree.
